The Wright Opera House will get the Hollywood treatment next month when Texas filmmaker Johnnie Hargrave shoots a scene in Ouray for his new movie "Fine Line."

"It's not going to be like Spielberg landed in your area or anything like that," said the film's creative mind. "It's going to be a small thing with a minimal amount of people. I don't want to cause a big ruckus or anything."

Detailing the journey of a man's search for his long lost father, "Fine Line" is a film based on various events minor film projects, Hargrave said "Fine Line" is the first major motion picture that he has put together. From writing the script, to casting, to funding the film himself, Hargrave has dedicated his time and talents to the movie's creation. He is very thankful to all the local business owners and friends who have helped him bring the filming to Ouray.

Along with help from manager Rennie Ross at the Wright, Hargrave said he's also working with God's Rods in Ridgway, Black Canyon Classics car club in Montrose, and the Durango and Silverton Narrow Gauge Railroad.
