Watershed partnership benefit to feature flyfishing films, expo

PLAINDEALER STAFF REPORT
plaindealer@ouraynews.com

Preserving and improving fishing habitat on the Uncompahgre River will be the focus at the Fly Fishing Film Tour on Saturday, presented by ROSS Reels and RIGS Fly Shop and Guide Service at the Montrose Pavilion, 1800 E. Pavilion Place. Proceeds will benefit Uncompahgre Watershed Partnership.

A fly fishing gear expo with casting and tying demonstrations, expert talks and giveaways will precede the films. Gear manufacturers with displays will include ROSS, Able, Winston, Hatch and Scott. UWP will also have a table with information about its various projects, from riparian restoration to water quality improvement at abandoned mine sites. The expo opens at 3 p.m. and is free.

UWP put $3,000 in proceeds from the first annual benefit in Ridgway to use in a project to improve fishery and riparian habitat and to restore and stabilize stream banks on Billy Creek, a few miles north of Ridgway Reservoir.

"It's critical our local angling community have a heightened sense of awareness and willingness to participate when it comes to the enhancement and preservation of our limited public access along the Uncompahgre River. As our region continues to grow, it's imperative we identify and engage in opportunities that protect and grow these assets in meaningful ways so future generations may continue to enjoy the resource," said Tim Patterson, co-owner of RIGS, a Ridgway business and river guiding company since 2001.

The film tour's medley of short documentaries introduces audiences to fly fishing adventures from around the world with a diverse set of characters. Featured fishing spots are revealed on the Chandalar River and other rivers across Alaska, the Caribbean Sea at Honduras, streams in California's Sierra Mountains and bodies of water in Greenland, Dubai, Central America and several African countries.

"The Fly Fishing Film Tour is a great collection of films, and a fantastic way for fly fishers to escape cabin fever and get excited about the start of fishing season, while also helping a great organization protect our home river," said Bart Larmouth, sales manager at Montrose-based ROSS Reels.

A cocktail hour with locally brewed beers starts at 6 p.m., and films begin at 7 p.m. Tickets for the films and benefit are $14 in advance online at <https://shop.fishrigs.com/search/film> or at RIGS, 565 Sherman St. in Ridgway. Tickets are $17 on Saturday, April 14. Admission to the fly fishing expo is free.
